Artist's Bio

Wittemann's art explores the emotions of the viewer through the sensual qualities of materials and colors. The artist uses recycled or construction materials as well as newspaper and transforms them into multisensory compositions that challenge perceptions of value and beauty.

Wittemann's works use colors to reflect emotional and physical states. Newspaper serves as a metaphor for the influence of the media on our worldview. Through the use of seductive, almost beguiling hues, she creates objects of desire that are irresistible and fascinating. Her artworks draw parallels to propaganda by presenting easily understandable myths that entice and captivate.

Her installations, consisting of painted newspaper on a metal grid, underscore the transformative power of the written word. As viewers immerse themselves in her works, they are enveloped in complete silence and feel the subtle constraints of media influence that capture their mind.

Marina Wittemann (*1984 in Moscow, Russia) currently lives and works in Germany. She studied Fine Arts at the Russian Academy of Arts in Moscow and received BA in Fine Arts at the Open University, The Open College of the Arts, UK.
